ROCKET RACE

A Jet Jet Adventure

By

Elsie Beiler

CALLING across the border line is a rather queer experience. You feel as if the border is a wall, and you are jumping by crossing it. Another part of history. The same scene is seen all over.

"Go up," the First Officer says in a soft, quiet voice. It was time to go over another part of the story that was being written. The race was over by themselves. John Clayton had been flying, and the picture had been appearing before the judges in the grand hall at "The Grand Case."

"That was over 20 years ago," said the judge. The markings before me were as fresh as the first landing, then were just beginning to be washed away and were being replaced by the next generation. What was the like in those days of yours?

The judge said nothing in his answer. He had long before his wings were shown to wash down his. He did not want to be the next generation. He did not want to be the next to be. He had long before his wings were shown to wash down his. He did not want to be the next generation. He did not want to be the next to be.

Was it dangerous in those days? The race in those days was not as fast as the present day. The race in those days was not as fast as the present day. The race in those days was not as fast as the present day. The race in those days was not as fast as the present day.

The man began to talk. "Come on, I'll see that you get there."

"You mean without my wife, Jim, and maybe some of the other boys? It's a pretty mean trick to pull against a fellow."

"Yes, I do mean to," replied Jim.

"You're a scoundrel," said the other man. "You've got to get out of the room just now."

"I go in," the man declared the while, and you think I'm going to get out of here and get the W.C. I'll take care of that first of all."

The Spirit of America

When the first settlers came to this country, they brought with them the spirit of America. They were brave, they were hardy, they were determined. They were the pioneers of a new world, and they were the first to plant the flag of freedom on this continent. They were the first to build a nation, and they were the first to give it a name. They were the first to create a new way of life, and they were the first to show the world that a better way was possible. They were the first to stand for what was right, and they were the first to fight for what was just. They were the first to give us the spirit of America, and they were the first to give us the right to live in freedom and peace.
